Property Description

The main terrace at Casa JolRay, which really feels like a living room, is perched directly above a pristine beach with inescapable views of the Pacific directly in front of you. This is heaven. In a more material sense, the home is one of few Costa Rica titled beachfront properties for sale in Guanacaste, and it's nestled in an extremely quiet - and idyllic - community called Playa Junquillal. The home has great access to amenities as it's about 40 minutes south of Tamarindo and just 1.25 hours from an international airport that adds more flights every year. The home's design explains it all - the primary living space and terrace are elevated onto a second story so that your view of the ocean is indescribable. The water is down below you; whale watching is easy and walking out to do the local turtle patrols takes only a few dozen steps. Its elevated ceilings and wide doors created incredible airflow through the interior, which is an open floor plan room with a kitchen and living areas for truly hosting people.
