Property Description

Casa Ohana, at its core, is not just a house: It's a timeless family home. Built on the "Gold Coast" of Central America and overlooking one of Costa Rica's renowned surfing areas is Casa Ohana, an architectural marvel set in a take-your-breath-away environment. The name Ohana is a Polynesian term that means "extended family." Casa Ohana is, indeed, a family home that sleeps twelve, accommodates young and old, reflects the ocean environment in its design, incorporates the earth in its materials but is, at its heart, a warm and wonderful place for families and friends to gather in a remarkably beautiful place. Casa Ohana is a natural combination of thoughtful modern design and local building skills which both pay tribute to the surrounding tropical environment. Tony Unruh, of Unruh Boyer Architecture and Design in Los Angeles designed Casa Ohana as a place where family and friends come together to live, love, and enjoy Playa Negra.
