Property Description

Imagine waking to drifting mountain clouds, filtered sunlight pouring through a skylit atrium, and the quiet rhythm of a living forest—Villa Mokha is not just a home, but a way of being. Villa Mokha is built on the south-facing slope of the Valle de Los Ángeles, just seven kilometers from San Ramón de Alajuela. The main residence features a dramatic, high-ceilinged Spanish-style central courtyard and atrium, fully enclosed beneath a broad skylight that fills the home with natural light. Interior Features – Flow Room to Room At the heart of the home, the atrium anchors daily life in light and air. Radiating from this core are generous living spaces designed for contemplation, creativity, and connection. The living and dining area opens seamlessly beneath soaring hardwood-clad ceilings. Massive exposed Almendro beams define the space, while a curtained alcove—ideal for reading, meditation, or red-light therapy—adds intimacy.
