Property Description

This exceptional permaculture finca located in San Pedro de Cajón, in the heart of Pérez Zeledón, sits at an ideal elevation of 810 meters above sea level, offering one of the most desirable climates in the region. The area enjoys mild temperatures year-round, cooler nights, pleasant days, and excellent conditions for agriculture and sustainable living. The property is surrounded by lush greenery in a quiet, natural setting. Cajón and San Pedro are known for their fertile soils, clean water, and authentic rural lifestyle, while still being conveniently close to San Isidro de El General, the main service and commercial center of southern Costa Rica. The finca already features a diverse and established variety of fruit trees and productive plants, including bananas, avocados, oranges, grapefruits, mandarins, mangos, vanilla, and many other tropical and subtropical species.
