Property Description

Designed by world-renowned architect Ronald Zurcher, whose portfolio also includes Costa Rica's only Four Seasons Hotel at Peninsula Papagayo, this private oceanfront compound is comprised of a Spanish-style main villa, coach house, garage, helipad, pool and stables, all situated on 13 lush tropical acres along the Nicoya Peninsula. Known for its seclusion, white-sand beaches, and some of the best surfing and scenery on the Pacific Coast, the Nicoya Peninsula and Montezuma are becoming one of the hottest places to own property in Costa Rica. Incredibly private compound surrounded by jungle and ocean. Popular destination for high-profile individuals seeking seclusion and anonymity. Wiring, fixtures, and key building materials imported from Europe, the US and other countries abroad | Vaulted brick ceilings | 35 teak columns | Custom iron works | Marble stone flooring from around the world | Roofing for the entire compound consists of clay tiles fired and made by hand in Nicaragua.
